

Ebook Quick Reference Guide

Clemson Libraries provide access to nearly 500,000 ebooks, many of which are from PASCAL subscriptions. These books come from several different companies and often have digital rights management (DRM) protection, so the process for accessing and downloading them can sometimes be... a bit complicated. Below is an outline to help you get the ebook you want as quickly and easily as possible.

You found an ebook that you want to...

read online.

You might have to log in with your Clemson credentials but are otherwise ready to read! Note that any highlights or notes you make may disappear when you close your session, especially if you have not logged in anywhere.

save for later.

In Ebook Central, sign in with your Clemson credentials to access your Bookshelf, where you can find recently viewed, annotated, and saved books.

In EBSCO, log in with your My EBSCOhost account – it's free, quick, and easy to create.

If you're on a...

laptop or desktop computer, you need:

- Adobe Digital Editions installed
- an Adobe ID to authorize it

mobile device or e-reader, you need:

- the Bluefire Reader app installed
- an Adobe ID to authorize it

Good to Know

- If you've installed Adobe Creative Cloud software, you already have an Adobe ID.
- If Adobe offers the option to log in with an enterprise ID, you can choose that and enter your usual Clemson username and password instead.
- Within an Ebook Central book, click the book icon (Book Details tab) to display your allowances – how many more pages you can view, print, and/or download.

More information on Clemson ebook access, including a full list of devices compatible with Adobe Digital Editions, is available on our ebook guide.
